

> trends STYLE PULSE

Hungry for More

Everyone loves food, which is why products inspired by tasty treats tend to sell well. Featuring items that remind consumers of their favorite delicacy is a no-brainer, and offering free food is an easy way to get people in the store. A brunch-and-browse event can provide plenty of conversation around creative and wacky products while allowing customers to chow down on some good eats. A cooking night can take the theme further, allowing consumers to see a retailer's store for more than just a place to shop. Here are our favorite food-inspired buys.

BY TORI LINVILLE

1 The Chocolatier's Gift Body Scrub is made with organic raw sugar, organic shea butter, raw organic cacao and virgin coconut oil that will make consumers wish they had a spoon. Thesis Beauty. thesisbeauty.com

CIRCLE #630

2 The Apple Strudel candle gives a space a fresh apple pie smell, calories not included. Milkhouse Candles. milkhousecandles.com

CIRCLE #631

3 Taco-patterned boxers add a sense of humor and move with the wearer. Two Left Feet. 247dm.com

CIRCLE #632

4 The al dente pasta-inspired jewelry is made from genuine sterling silver, gold and diamonds and will warm the heart of any starch lover. Delicacies Jewelry. delicaciesjewelry.com

CIRCLE #633

5 The pizza kit is realistic and made with natural materials that will have the family headed out for a slice in no time. Papoose Toys. magicforest.com

CIRCLE #634

6 Rustica Sandwich Boards are made from Acacia wood, have a hole for hanging storage and are inspired by a sandwich's staple—the bread that holds everything together. Ironwood. ironwoodgourmet.com

CIRCLE #635